  Camp STEM brings students to WVU Tech's campus in Beckley, West Virginia for college-level STEM instruction. Students can attend courses in a variety of STEM fields such as computer science, chemistry, automotive engineering, electrical engineering and forensic science as WVU Tech professors guide them through experiments, provide lectures and give demonstrations. Outside the classroom, students will work in teams on a weeklong robotics project, attend guest lectures by STEM professionals and embark on fields trips.
  The cost for this camp is $600 per camper, but we offer a limited number full and partial need-based scholarships.
  At Camp STEM, students will experience campus life by living in our residence halls, eating in WVU Tech's Bears Den dining hall and relaxing in one of our campus recreation facilities. Students are supervised by WVU Tech student counselors, who are upper-classmen studying STEM disciplines.
