Today is a part of National School Counseling Week. Today's message is about tapping into your network to reach your dreams. Katy Perry once said, "It takes a village to make me who I am." This simple quote has a lot of depth. Each one of us has a village. Your village consists of your classmates, friends, family, teachers, and others who surround you each day. Your village can help you become who you want to be. Your village is your network. Sometimes when we share our dreams and goals with our village, they can provide much needed support to help us achieve them. Think about who is in your village that you trust to help with your dreams and who could be a resource to you along your path to achieving your goals. Remember, your counselors are in your village and are ready to chat with you about your dreams.
